

Project Manager - Contract

Remote, but ideally Italy

The Company

Elemed are working exclusively with our partner based in Italy, searching for their new Project Manager. The company is going through an exciting stage of funding and are looking to expand their team by hiring an experienced project manager to join them during their international growth.

This company is producing innovative class III medical devices which are currently registered in both Europe and America. A great global opportunity and team to be part of. The company itself is a small start up, but an exciting point of growth. They have recently received a second round of funding, which will enable them to develop their product further internationally.

The team is a small but strong one, made up of top experts in the field of medical devices for the company's specialist product area. Thus providing you with a great and unique opportunity to work with the industry's top experts.

The Role

As the project manager in this role your responsibilities will include but not be limited to:

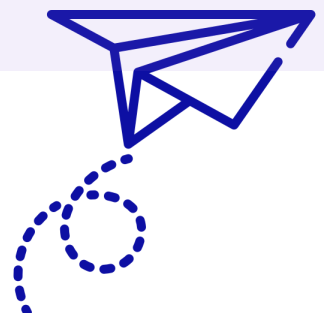

- Manage the overall timelines of international projects.
- Report directly to the CEO in terms of KPIs, timelines and project plans.
- Work with cross functional teams, from regulatory affairs to clinical research to ensure there is a strong synergy between them.
- Direct on customer timelines and guidelines.
- Provide clear scientific guidance.

The successful candidate will have the following:

- A project management certification.
- Previous project management experience within the medical device industry. We will also look at profiles from a life science background.
- Great communication skills in English. Fluency in Italian is a bonus.
- Availability from January 2021.
- Ability to work 2 days a week.
- Can be based remotely, but has the flexibility to travel if required.

Ensure you apply now to find out about this fast moving contract opportunity with a globally growing medical device company based in Italy.
